The railroad reached Santa Rosa in 1870, and the town became a center for shipment of agricultural crops all over the country. Today, Railroad Square is the center of Santa Rosa's historic district.
Welcome

Legend tells us Santa Rosa was named for an Indian girl baptized by Padre Juan Amoros on the feast day of St. Rose of Lima. Photo ca. 1920s. Courtesy The Bancroft Library.

A hearty welcome to Santa Rosa, the site of the 30th Annual General Meeting of the Society of California Archivists! As a professional archival organization, we have been providing opportunities to our membership for education and networking for thirty years. While this does not signify as a silver or golden anniversary, it is a milestone. This anniversary also coincides with our cultural entry into the 21st century, a signpost of significance. Last summer, as the program committee and I began to brainstorm about the meeting and possible sessions, I began to think that this year’s annual meeting offered an opportunity to consider archival fundamentals - such as acquisition, archival description, collection development, preservation and reference - through the lens of the exciting changes our profession has experienced during the last decade. During the last ten years we have seen the rapid growth of online access to our collections and the entrusting to our care of electronic records and “born digital” information.

Our keynote speaker, Anne Gilliland-Swetland, Professor at the UCLA School of Education and Information Studies, will set the tone for the meeting in her address, “Enduring Paradigm, New Opportunities: The Value of the Archival Perspective in the Digital Environment.” I hope that as you attend the sessions you will reflect upon the strong values of our archival profession and the enduring functions we perform to preserve the past and make it accessible for the future. Our core archival values continue to serve as we face the challenges of an evolving digital environment, and our traditional functions remain unchanged as we incorporate the care and feeding of electronic records into our daily tasks.
Our 30th Annual General Meeting will be held at the Flamingo Hotel. Our headquarters hotel offers many amenities including a resort spa, a full-service health club and well-appointed guest rooms. The hotel is well situated and has convenient access to downtown Santa Rosa’s historic shopping area Pioneer Square, state highway 101 - the Redwood Highway - and several local roads that will lead you to the wine country of Napa and Sonoma County, redwood forests, and Northern California’s coast. On behalf of the Program and Local Arrangements Committees, I welcome you to our annual meeting set in the Gateway to the Redwood Empire and the Wine Country!

Program Committee Chair

Santa Rosa: Gateway to the Redwood Empire and Wine Country

In A Companion to California, James D. Hart described Santa Rosa as the seat of Sonoma County and as a major market, merchandising, and processing center for the ranches, farms, and vineyards of Sonoma Valley. In the 1960s and 70s Santa Rosa began its steady growth as a residential suburb for the San Francisco Bay Area. Today, Sonoma County hosts a booming telecommunications industry and a growing tourist trade coinciding with their agricultural forebears. According to Hart, one of Santa Rosa’s most famous landmarks is the house and gardens of the experimental horticulturist, Luther Burbank. The small town atmosphere of Santa Rosa was featured in Alfred Hitchcock’s 1943 film Shadow of a Doubt. Fond of the area, Hitchcock returned in 1963 to film The Birds at the Sonoma Coastal village of Bodega Bay.
Natives of the city include Robert Ripley, journalist and cartoonist, born in Santa Rosa in 1918, who created the newspaper feature “Believe it or Not” setting forth “unusual and tantalizing facts.” Jack London made his home nearby in the Valley of Moon, where he built his tragically doomed home “Wolf House” in the vineyards of Glen Ellen and wrote some of his greatest work including The Sea Wolf. More recently Santa Rosa became known as the home of the beloved creator of “Peanuts,” Charles Schultz.

Thursday, April 26

10 a.m.-5 p.m.       Pre-conference Workshop One

Preserving Your Historical Records: An Archival Holdings Maintenance Workshop

Instructor: Blythe Lee, Preservation Field Services Officer, AMIGOS

This workshop will cover the basics of proper care and storage of archives and manuscript collections, including an overview of the causes of deterioration; selection of folders, boxes, and other housing materials; processing of archives; providing storage for oversized materials, maps, and photographs; proper handling and exhibition practices; basic paper repair techniques; and the development of holdings maintenance policies, guidelines and practices.

9 a.m.-5 p.m.       Pre-conference Workshop Two

Exploring XML: eXtensible Mark-Up Language

Instructor: Richard Marciano, UC San Diego Super Computing Center programmer and a participant in the NHPRC funded project entitled “Methodologies for Preservation and Access to Electronic Records.”

Geared towards the needs of archivists, this introductory workshop will provide an overview of available XML tools currently used to create documents and retrieve data on the web, discuss XML’s use in data management, and explore new applications of XML including collection based persistent digital archives and topic maps. Participants are also encouraged to bring their thoughts for discussions about archival issues where online tools could help resolve archival challenges.

6-8 p.m.  Opening Reception

Please join us for a twilight reception at the Flamingo Resort Hotel. Meet your friends and enjoy light refreshments near the pool, sample wines from some of the local vineyards, or take a break and view the documentary Ishi the Last Yahi. Tickets will be available tonight and throughout the conference for purchase for the fabulous prizes in the Annual Educational Endowment Fund Drawing. All proceeds go to support SCA’s educational programs. Following the reception, you may want to dine at Santa Rosa’s Pioneer Square, an easy ten-minute walk or brief drive. See the SCA registration desk or Local Arrangements Committee for suggestions.

7-8 p.m. Video Documentary: Ishi the Last Yahi, by Jed Riffe, Documentary Filmmaker

Shown in conjunction with Saturday’s Plenary Panel. Come see the dramatic story of Ishi’s survival of genocide and his transition from aboriginal America into the twentieth century. Ishi adapted without losing his sense of self and in the process taught those around him the true meaning of humanity.

Session 1

You Become the Memento Mori: Donor Relations in the “Sea of Keepsakes”

Lucinda Glenn Rand, Graduate Theological Union Archives, Chair
Susan Sherwood, Labor Archives and Research Center
Kim Klausner, Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual & Transgender Archives
Susan Searcy, Nevada State Library and Archives

Have you ever thought of yourself as a “memento mori”? The title of Muriel Spark’s 1959 novel uses the old English word “mori” meaning sea, lake, pond, marsh. The Latin meaning of the phrase “memento mori” is “remembrance of death.” Donor relations can sometimes feel like one is wading through a marshy pond of historical materials, intangible emotions, and sticky expectations. This panel will offer participants the opportunity to have a free-flowing discussion about the intricacies of donor relations ranging from the legal to the personal aspects of negotiation and donation. Come with questions and stories.

10:30 a.m.-12:00 p.m.
Session 2

Managing & Preserving Electronic Records

Jean Deken, Stanford Linear Accelerator Center, Chair
Dr. Kenneth Thibodeau, Director, Electronic Records Program, NARA
Kalpana Shankar, UCLA
Shelby Sanett, UCLA
Richard Marciano, UC San Diego Super Computing Center

Creation and preservation of authentic records in the electronic environment is a formidable challenge that is being approached by archivists across the globe in a variety of ways. Speakers in this session will discuss the methods people are using to study records creation and use, and the applicability and need for this type of study in the electronic records arena. The specific efforts
Friday, April 27

currently being undertaken by the UC San Diego Supercomputing Center and the US National Archives and Records Administration to develop data management for electronic records collections will be discussed, as well as the efforts of the InterPARES, an international study of effective methods for saving valuable records created in computers.

12-1:30 p.m.

Lunch

Speaker: Nancy Zimmelman, WAI Administrator & Archivist,
California State Archives

“An Update on NFACE, Regional Collaboration and Cooperation and the Western Archives Institute”

In the year since the National Forum on Archival Continuing Education (NFACE), there have been substantial efforts nationwide to begin to implement the NFACE action agenda and foster regional collaboration and cooperation for archival continuing education. The speaker, the Society’s NFACE representative and Administrator of the Western Archives Institute will provide an update concerning NFACE and its goals and will share news about the role being taken by the Society of California Archivists, through the Western Archives Institute, to help to meet regional continuing education needs and form links for future regional collaboration and cooperation.
Friday, April 27

1:30-3 p.m.  Session 3

Establishing Archives and Creating Collections: Three Examples from Sonoma County

Mike Griffith, 9th US District Court Archives, Chair
Melissa McGann, Charles M. Schulz Museum & Research Center
LisaMarie Strawter, Sonoma State University Special Collections
Lucy Kortum, Petaluma Historical Museum and Library

This session will examine the challenges of establishing new archives and of creating collections from the perspective of three different institutions from Sonoma County. From each panelist, we will hear their strategy for creating and organizing a documentary record for their institution. Speakers will address the establishment of an archival program within a museum setting, the creation of a collection documenting women artists and the establishment of an oral history program. The session also highlights the richness of archival resources from the wine country region.

1:30-3 p.m.  Session 4

EAD Authoring Tools for a Small Planet

Genie Guerard, UCLA Special Collections, Chair and comment
David Gartrell, UC Santa Barbara Special Collections
Michael Conkin, UC Berkeley Library
Guenter Waibel, Berkeley Art Museum/Pacific Film Archive
Steven Mandeville-Gamble, Stanford University Special Collections
Friday, April 27

For those who want to start encoding your finding aids but don’t know where to start, this session will provide insight into available tools and the means to evaluate the approach suitable for your repository. Speakers will discuss and compare tools available for EAD production for archives and museum collections including word processing macros and databases as well as the EAD cookbook approach developed by Michael Fox at the Minnesota Historical Society. In commentary, the Chair will provide a management perspective on how to evaluate the approach best for you and the professional resources available for consultation.

Moving Mountains, Moving Water: Documenting Engineering in California

Randal Brandt, Water Resource Center Archives, Chair
Dan Lewis, The Huntington Library
Andrew Johnston, Caltrans District 4
Linda Jordan, The Bancroft Library

Most people cannot imagine life without the many contributions of engineers to the public’s health, safety and standard of living. Civil engineering’s contributions to daily life including transportation, clean water and power generation are magnificent in scope and functionality. This session features a curator, a historian and a processing archivist who will provide their unique perspectives on the collection development, historical uses, access to and processing of special formats related to engineering and technical records in California. Special focus will be given to the collecting of civil engineering records, the Historic American Engineering Record (HAER) in California, and Michael O’Shaughnessy and the building of San Francisco.

Session 6

Think Globally, Act Locally: Documenting California Business and Industry in the 21st Century

Julie Reiz, Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Chair
Roberto Landazuri, Dolby Laboratories
Abner Nolan, Gap Inc.
Randal Luckow, Dreamworks, SKG

This session will examine how three major California corporations that have significant international connections have established and managed archival and records management programs. Presentations will include the importance of the archives to preserving a collegial information sharing culture in a technology research company, a discussion of a database developed to manage archival records throughout a company, and establishing a "born digital" archival program for a motion-picture film company.

11 a.m.-12:30 p.m.  Session 7

Reference Practices Discussion Group

Jennifer Schaffner, UCLA Clark Library

This session will test the utility of a discussion-group format for archivists who do reference in all types and sizes of repositories. Facilitated by an archivist who manages reference activities at her repository, discussion will range freely over issues of reference services in an evolving environment where some tools are both on paper and online. Topics include effective reference interviews, security practices in the reading room, the impact of online finding aids and digitization projects, improving referrals to our colleague’s collections, the impact of email reference and non-traditional users, outreach for collections with and without online finding aids, and managing the difficult patron. If this session is deemed useful, participants can consider continuing discussions online as an organized Listserv, developing an affinity group, etc. This format has been used effectively in the Rare Books and Manuscripts Division of the American Library Association.

11 a.m.-12:30 p.m.  Session 8

State Perspectives on Digital Imaging Projects

Waverly Lowell, Environmental Design Archives, Chair and comment
Ira Bray, LSTA Program Officer
Joan Berman, Humboldt State University
Brad Bauer, Thousand Oaks Public Library

The California Library Services and Technology Act (LSTA) program cannot possibly fund all digitization efforts in the state. The process of creating electronic resources involving digitization requires a significant amount of effort, education, experience and funds, but in and of itself is not quite the innovation it was a few years ago. Previous and existing LSTA grants provide us with valuable lessons, but future LSTA funding can only support efforts that go beyond local needs using existing technology and processes. This session will include a discussion of the evolving LSTA program in California and other states in terms of standards, guidelines, the changing technological environment and future funding priorities and two case studies. The case studies will reveal first hand experiences of the first phases administering a one-year project and a completed grant resulting in over 500 glass plate negatives digitized by a commercial vendor. The Chair - an experienced grant reviewer for NEH and NHRPC - will provide comment.

12:30-2 p.m.       Lunch

Speaker: Susan Lee Johnson, Historian, University of Colorado, Boulder

“Roaring Camp: The Social World of the California Gold Rush”

Dr. Johnson will discuss her recently published work Roaring Camp that explores the dynamic multiracial, multiethnic, and often homosocial world created by the gold rush in the Sierra Nevada foothills east of Stockton. She will discuss how this particular world - populated by Mexican families, California Indians, and Anglos - evolved over time and how our cultural memory of the gold rush took root.
Saturday, April 28

2-3:30 p.m. Special Plenary Panel

Ishi’s Journey Home

In August 1911, Ishi, the last member of his tribe, walked out of the foothills near Mount Lassen - leaving behind his Stone Age world - and entered twentieth-century California society. From 1911-1916, Ishi resided at the Anthropology Museum of the University of California Affiliated Colleges on Parnassus Heights in San Francisco (now the site of the University of California, San Francisco), sharing knowledge about his culture and beliefs with Anthropologists Alfred L. Kroeber and Theodore T. Waterman, as well as Surgeon Saxton T. Pope. Ishi contracted tuberculosis and died on March 25, 1916 at the medical college on Parnassus leaving behind a legacy of valuable information about his people, and providing a shining example of a courageous human spirit bridging the divide between two worlds. However, his story did not end there. In 1997, the Yana Tribe, convinced that Ishi’s remains should be repatriated to his homeland, officially requested their return. This request brought about the resolution of a mystery within the scientific, medical and historical communities as to the location of Ishi’s brain. The panel will discuss Native American repatriation in general. More importantly, it will share with you the story of Ishi’s repatriation and how the scientific community required the archival record to legitimize the Native American knowledge tendered through the generations by the oral tradition.

Everybody’s Doing It: Virtual Archives

Karen Jean Hunt, Cal State University Dominguez Hills, Chair
Brad Westbrook, UC San Diego Special Collections
Bill Landis, UC Irvine Special Collections
Robin Chandler, California Digital Library

Virtual Archives hold the promise of online cross-institutional collection building and promoting access to materials to non-traditional user communities. This session will provide reality bytes from both actual and theoretical perspectives. Presentations will propose a definition of virtual archives, address “successes and failures” of several current examples, the importance of metadata in enabling the construction of virtual archives, the importance of cross institutional metadata standards, and how the construction of multi-repository virtual archives may require creative forms of collaboration, funding and approaches to processing and description.
Saturday, April 28

3:30-5 p.m.          Session 10

Many Hats, Fewer Heads: Managing Smaller Archival Collections

Tanya Hollis, California Historical Society, Chair and Speaker
Michele Wellck, California Academy of Sciences
Pat Johnson and Stasia Wolfe, Sacramento Archives and Museum Collection Center
Daryl Morrison, University of the Pacific

This session will address the challenges and successes of administering small archival collections. The speakers will present brief presentations designed to stimulate your thoughts, followed by active discussion among the panel members and the audience. Presentations will include the ‘up’ side and flexibility of decision-making in a museum archival program, making structural changes in staff organization, addressing the need for continued education when your job keeps changing, the particular needs of a special collections within a larger institution, and building a successful program with limited resources.
