The Bakersfield College Archives name is descriptive. We focus primarily on the history of Bakersfield College itself (founded in 1913), with minor attention to our sister colleges and the Kern Community College District. The website digitization includes all issues of the student newspaper Renegade Rip, from 1923 to the present, and all editions of the yearbook Raconteur, from 1932 through 1981. Not all of our holdings have been digitized. If you find a listing in the online catalog that does not include a digitized copy, please call the Archives office for further help.

Among the library's many holdings are materials focused on the history of the book and printing as well as the Macpherson collection of books by and about women. The Scripps College Archives provide materials on the history of the college and include the papers of the college's namesake and founder, Ellen Browning Scripps. The library also has a sizable collection of artists' books, a genre which supports the interdisciplinary nature of the Scripps curriculum. Digitized materials are accessible online through the Claremont Colleges Digital Library, and a rotating series of exhibits highlight the wide range of materials from the library's collections.

Materials document the full spectrum of activities throughout the history of the Los Angeles Philharmonic dating to its founding in 1919, including activities of the Hollywood Bowl. The collection provides a unique and richly detailed perspective on the Los Angeles Philharmonic's impact on 20th and 21st century music and society, its contributions to the cultural heritage of Los Angeles and Southern California, and its performance history in associated venues including the Hollywood Bowl and Walt Disney Concert Hall. Highlights include concert programs and other publications; concert recordings and radio broadcasts; photographs, slides, and negatives; and posters and ephemera.

The Mike Kelley Foundation for the Arts Archives maintains a collection of original papers and materials related to the artist's life and work. These materials were accumulated over the course of Mike Kelley's life and transferred to the Foundation in 2015. The Archives also maintains the records of the Mike Kelley Foundation for the Arts, which was founded by the artist in 2007 and continues his philanthropic legacy today.

The Mike Kelley Foundation is currently processing its archive of materials in order to make them accessible to researchers and scholars in the future. While the review is in progress, the Foundation may, at its discretion, make selected items available by special arrangement to those conducting specific research on Mike Kelley or organizing exhibitions featuring his work.

Monterey County Free Libraries' local history collection consists of books, photographs, maps, ephemera and documents on the history of Monterey County and California. The collection offers historical interpretation of Monterey County and its role in California history. Digitized images in the collection include photographs, postcards, and documents of people, places, and buildings. Of particular interest are photographs of the first county librarian, Anne Hadden, delivering library service on horseback to Big Sur, and photographs of farm labor camps in Monterey County circa 1960s.

Our highlight is the largest collection of John Muir materials which helps to understand the history of the environmental movement. We also focus geographically on Stockton, the San Joaquin Valley, and the southern Gold Rush area. Additional strengths are in Japanese-American Internment during World War II and San Francisco politics during the 1970s with the George Moscone Collection.
